"15. The contribution of Air Force Special Air Warfare units to the overall effort." (S)

STAG Comment: (TS) The Air Force Special Air Warfare Units were originally established to support Army Special Forces and certain other operations in Southeast Asia. Until the introduction of additional AF transport the Air Force Special Air Warfare units provided a large portion of the airlift to support Army Special Forces operations. Now that additional transport is available from other AF resources the importance of airlift support furnished the Army Special Forces by Air Force Special Air Warfare units has diminished. The study group was unable to obtain any other details of operations of this group in Southeast Asia.
